Signed His Name In Note Book. Questioned by Assistant District At-torney Robert H. Talley, with regard to the note book, witness asserted posito the note book, witness asserted positively that he never saw it before.

"It that is so, Mr. Rhea," said Mr.
Talley, "how do you account for your signature to a receipt entered upon one of its pages." The signature was there, and it looked the a poser. The witness looked at the book coolly and handed it back with this remark;

"That's my signature, but I don't remember the book. I fook no notice of the book at the time I signed my Oren T. Burroughs, the defendant, stated that no irregularities could take place at the distillery without his knowledge, and that none had taken place. He had permitted no spirits to leave the elstern room, he said, without the required stamp. Elmore, he declared never paid him may money. He never saw the mysterious little note book before, and kept every account required by law accurately. If untaypaid spirits were smuggled out of the elstern room, without his knowledge, the discrepancy would at once show in his records. Nothing of the kind, he sa'd, appeared.

ISPECIAL TO THE TIMES-DISPATCH, J
Manassas, Va., April 5.—In the Circuit Court of this county to-day R. C.
Reid was convicted and sentenced to serve one year in the State Penitentiary for a imalicious assault committed on J. B. Ashby on December II last Reid, at close range, fired at Ashby with a small callbre rifle. The bullet struck Ashby in the neck and injured the spinal cord. At present Ashby is In Gartield Hospital, Washington, completely paralyzed, and his death is looked for at any time.

Although the evidence showed the shooting was wholly unjustified, the jury imposed a light sentence owing to the fact that Reid and Ashby had had previous trouble, brought about by the yettin of the shooting
